Call for Demonstrations

IEEE MASS 2012 will feature a demo session that provides a forum for wireless ad hoc and sensor network researchers and developers from academia, industry, and government to interact with and explore the latest research results. Towards this goal, IEEE MASS 2012 solicits demonstrations presenting recent original results or ongoing research. Authors are invited to submit interesting results on all aspects of ad hoc and sensor networks, including algorithms, protocols, applications, new research prototypes, testbeds, among others. Demonstrations allow a one-on-one interaction with attendees and authors, where the benefits of the proposed research can be practically highlighted, thereby enhancing its impact.

Submission Instructions

Demonstration abstracts of no more than 2 pages (US letter size 8.5 x 11 inches) using font size 10 should be submitted via EDAS, and any queries may be addressed to the Demonstration Chair: Kaushik Chowdhury (krc@ece.neu.edu). This extended abstract should include a figure of the system that shall eventually be demonstrated to the audience. Authors are allowed up to one additional page for listing any specific requirements (such as space, general purpose WiFi, non interfering wireless channels, power supply needs) and the organizers will earnestly look into arranging this support. Please include names of the authors, affiliations and email addresses in the abstract, and indicate "MASS 2012 Demo" as the subject of the email in any correspondence with the Demonstration Chair. The authors with accepted demos are allowed to display a poster for presentation, and additional details on the poster dimensions will be provided closer to the submission deadline.
